How long have you been creating art?

I have practiced since I was a kid and started a professional art job in 2013.

What do you love to draw the most?

I like to draw so many things but mostly cute girls and fantasy backgrounds.

What motivates you to draw?

It's simple, I feel very satisfied when I can put what I imagine into a picture and everytime I draw, people seem to like my art and want to see more of my work, that makes me very motivated to draw more!

Who/What is the inspiration behind your art?

At first it came from my brother. He likes anime, manga and games and he shared it with me since I was a kid. He even tried to practice drawing manga and I got inspired by him so I started to practice drawing too.

Do you accept commissions?

Yes I accept both, personal use and commercial use.

BABY BUN

FATE : “Lazy For You”

Location : Nine Ivies, Black Shroud

Tastes great on salads and in stews.

For those wondering on the ill effects of inhaling spores released by common funguars, according to the Encyclopedia Eorzea (third edition), funguar spores “befoul the body’s humours and claim control of an individual’s very soul, rendering them a mindless thrall.”

HEDGEHOGLET

Dungeon : The Hidden Canals of Uznair
The Shifting Altars of Uznair

Only your selfless love and affection can keep him blissfully dilemma-free.

For centuries, hedgehogs have been considered a delicacy in the Far East, their succulent flesh supped upon by prince and pauper alike. An influx of Western traders more interested in keeping the pups as pets, however, has all but put an end to this grisly tradition.

ADVENTURE BASKET

Crafted : Weaver Lvl. 90

Because no one should have to save the world on an empty stomach.

Be it a frozen waste or a volcano's fiery bowels, no matter where your adventures take you, this basket laden with tasty morsels will nourish your body while lifting your spirit. Cutlery and crockery included for your consuming convenience.

"This is a picnic compared to my officer training..." - Dancing Wolf

MAMESHIBA

Retainer Venture : Highland Exploration XXIV

Who let the newborn miniature Far Eastern canine specimen out? Who, who, who, who, who!?

An unscrupulous merchant passed this pup off as a rare species of miniature dog known as the mameshiba. Such a thing does not exist. Rather than have the hapless owners discover the deception when it grows, it was trained to run away.

Peisteskin Treasure Map

Known to retroactively bring good fortune to those who have already experienced good fortune.

Fortunate to hatch before being eaten by lizards. Unfortunate to fall from its nest before learning to fly. Fortunate to land in an empty treasure coffer. Unfortunate to still be in said coffer as it is filled with booty and locked up again. Fortunate to be plundered... by you.

MUSE

BY ARKANA GREY

Happy new year GPOSERS, and welcome back to Muse! We're all about finding new ideas for /gpose here and with this month's magazine theme of "Winter Cottagecore" we're going to look at themes all about being cozy and living a little witchy lifestyle. Find your coziest glam and let's get started!

Winter Gardening

The quaint cottage in the countryside dream goes hand-in-hand with a little garden to nurture and care for. Got a personal or free company house? Snag a spot surrounded by gardening items and get posing! And if you don't have a house? Steal somebody else's garden! In this case, I'm sure they won't mind. Here I chose to use the apple-eating emote and also used the Particle screen effect to emphasize the feeling of snow and coldness (actually, I use that screen effect a lot this month!). Once you're set-up, try different angles rather than the usual face-on. Why not have the camera hidden among the vegetation? Or a bird's-eye view can highlight the patterns in your garden. Experiment and see what works for you!

Man's Best Friend

Let's not forget about our favorite companion—chocobos are man's best friend, after all. Give that chick a warm outfit for photos and take them out to a snowy location, such as Coerthas or Garlemald. For this section, I used greeting cards as inspiration and settled on the Simple 1 frame. The sticker mode has some sweet decorations that really give the homemade greeting card feeling, why not try some of those too? Isn't he so handsome! Fun fact, my Chocobo has been named Hermes since I began playing in 2015. He aged well.

Baby, It's Cold Outside

It wouldn't be a cottagecore issue without some actual cottage living involved, right? Either build or hunt down a cozy home to settle in. Is a good book your style? Maybe a little brunch with coffee? A little early spring cleaning, perhaps? Anything goes, as long as there is a warm fireplace involved. Here I also used a light source on setting 1 with an orange/red hue to really give the flame ambiance.

gposers

Fluffy Friends

Farmyard animals are popular in the countryside, so get down to Coerthas and find a friend to hug or pet! Who cares if it's freezing temperatures! Here I used some lighting in neutral white and very light blue, and the Particle effect returns once more. Gather your friends and /pet or /hug the creature—as long as you are higher level than the beast it won't attack you, however, it also won't stay still in /gpose. To combat this, enter /gpose in position and have a friend use an auto-attack and lure it to where you want it to stand. Eureka! A wholesome screenshot is born.

Witchy Business

For our final muse, we will be visiting Photoshop or similar software such as Gimp and Photopea. You'll also need GShade or a lot of patience. First, find your broom mount and fly high in the sky in a zone of your choice, then choose a pose and expression. In /gpose, we are first going to take a screenshot of our character against a chroma key, and then another screenshot of only the background by hiding our character in the character display settings—I use ArkanaTemperanceChromakey in GShade for this process and ArkanaTemperance for the background. Don't forget to check the chroma key option in settings for the green area to automatically become transparent!

Open your background in the chosen software, and then load in your character chroma key on a separate layer. First, we will use motion blur on the background, and ensure that the direction is parallel to our character. You can use the broom as a good indicator of which direction the motion blur should be going. Then create a new layer and choose a splatter brush in white and grey, making various splatters across the image in different sizes, and use motion blur on this too. This is another layer of snow as we fly through the scene!

Another layer of very large splatters and a motion blur will give us the specks of snow close to the camera. As a final touch, on the background layer, I created a subtle lens flare and then created two clipping layers of light and darkness over my character to create a little more depth, setting the light layer to Linear(add) and the shadow layer to multiply.

gposers

Check back in next month for more screenshot inspiration, and don't forget to share your creations with us in the GPOSERS Discord server and the #GPOSERS hashtag on Twitter!

The Founder's Crypt

Western La Noscea (23, 20)

The Founder's Crypt stands in commemoration of the settler Aerghaemr, a heroic soul who stood alone against the Sahagin when they attacked in a valiant attempt to buy his comrades time to escape.

gposers

Kelk

Amh Araeng (20, 21)

The ruins of a Ronso settlement. Kelk was abandoned by its residents in favor of the cities long before the Flood began its devastation. The area is well-known amongst scavengers as a prime location for the discovery of trinkets and relics left untouched by conflict.

gposers

The Lonely Giant

Eastern Thanalan (19.6, 24.7)

Local legend claims the Lonely Giant to be many things—from the ghost of a Sil'dihn sultan, to a prototype for a new model of Garlean machina. But, Ul'dahn scholars believe him to be nothing more than a Coerthan goobbue who lost his bearings during the chaos of the Calamity and succumbed to exhaustion upon reaching Thalanan.
